I just would like to say how much joy Regina brought in our lives. She was such a strong person and was wonderful to be around. She was there when we needed her no matter what. She was so funny and so kind. I've always looked up to her and wanted to tell her that, even now. She was so loved by everyone and I know she's looking down right now watching us and making her usual sarcastic jokes. She will forever be in our hearts.

VICKIE GORDON - LANCASTER, TEXAS, FEBRUARY 7, 2018

Letitia, Words cannot begin to express how shocked and surprised I was to learn of Gina's passing. She was such a bright light and I enjoyed the times I got to spend with her. I found her to be such an intelligent, inspirational young lady. The world has certainly lost out because we won't have the benefit of her presence. I know she would have been very successful in all of her endeavors, because of her determination and wonderful outlook on life. She will be truly missed. It is so difficult to lose a loved one, but she was so young and just getting started in the adventures life has to offer. I find that the hardest part to accept. I know this is terribly hard, but you have lots of family and friends here to support you and be there for you. I am so, so sorry. Please know I have you and your family in my thoughts and prayers.

JENE JANICH, FEBRUARY 7, 2018

Reggie, I'm the most serious I've ever been when I say you were like a big sister to me. We've known each other since 5th Grade in Mr. Sinclair's class, and you thought I was a total wuss at first. And it was pretty true; you could lift me easily after all! And even though we didn't get along for the first month or so, you stuck around me for some reason you never told me, and I thank God that you let me be a part of your life. Over the next 7 years or so, you let me proofread every story you wrote, I remember running to your bus to give you art for your character Zero before you left on your birthday, we worked together with editing your Chaos story over text, and you helped me create aliens for the huge book of characters I still have next to my desk. I even broke out journals I kept in boxes from 5th grade recently, with lists of everything we wrote down that we had in common: final count, 85! It's small things like that make me not know what to do with myself now that you're back home after such a short stay. But again, I had to thank God I ran into you on the last day you were in school, and you talked to me as I helped you to the nurse. You weren't worried about yourself or how you were feeling; you were worried about the other people around you. You were worried about disappointing your parents for missing so much school, and making them come down all the way from work just to make sure you were okay. And you didn't want me or any of the rest of your friends to worry, either. You put EVERYONE first before yourself and I can't tell you how much respect you've garnered from me over the years for moments exactly like that. Gender, age and physical strength doesn't matter: you were the TOUGHEST person I've ever known. So, even though your body has served its purpose, I hope your soul can still hear me talking to you from down here. It's been so hard to just sit and think about the fact that I can't see you anymore. But even though I can't hear your responses, talking to you with what I've been feeling lately and asking about you and how everything is up there has honestly kept me from going off the deep end. Things are going to be hard for a while, for every single one of us that knew you, and how much of a caring, unapologetic, excited, inspired and overall amazing person you were. But you didn't want to be a burden to anyone, and everything I said to you on that last day of school still stands: you weren't and will never be a burden to any one of us. Whether it was family or friends, we just cared about you with everything we possibly had, and loved you so, so much. We'll be sad, and we're never just gonna get over you, but I want to promise you that me and everybody else you knew are going to be living our best lives for you. We're never going to forget you, and we'll take your memory and everything you've done for us into the future, until we meet you again. Can't wait to see you, because we'll have some stories to finish up! Love you, Reggie.

ROBERT WILLIAMS, FEBRUARY 7, 2018

Regina was a friend to me when I needed one the most.

CHLOE ROZELLE, FEBRUARY 7, 2018

Regina was one of the sweetest most kind people I've ever met. She never failed to make me laugh and have a good time with me. She was one of the first people I became friends with when I moved here and I'm going to miss her very much.

RASHAUNDA HENDERSON, FEBRUARY 7, 2018

Regina, I will miss saying hi to and I'm the hallway so everyday and having conversations with you. We both never cared what people thought about us and I knew I was always able to just let go and be myself around you. You had a bright spirit, and it has never changed since we became friends in the 5th grade until now. I wish I could have gotten to know you so much deeper,

Regina, because you always made me smile and forget about the worries I had. You are an inspiration and will never be forgotten

PATE CATHEY, FEBRUARY 6, 2018

Thinking of you and your loved ones. Wishing you peace and comfort as you remember your Gigi. I'm remembering your kindness and love for your family. You are in my prayers.

Letitia, God bless you always and especially now. My heart is heavy which means that I don't have enough words to truly console you...only God can do that. You have always expressed so much love for both your children so the loss of your child is unimaginable. My ears are here to listen, my heart to share your grief, and eyes to share your tears.
